

PULLEN HALL

Constructed in 1902, Pullen Hall was named after Richard Stanhope Pullen who donated the first sixty acres to what became our campus. It contained an auditorium, library, dining hall, and chapel. In 1912, the dining hall moved to the new Leazar Hall and in 1926, the library moved to the new D.H. Hill Library, now Brooks Hall, becoming the English and Math Building. In 1957 it became solely the Music Building. An arsonist set fire to the Greek-Revival style building in 1965 completely destroying the instruments inside. Photo courtesy of University Archives.

YMCA BUILDING

The YMCA State College Chapter began in 1889 helping students "live more effective Christian lives." This building, completed in 1913, stood next to Syme Dormitory housing a bookstore and gathering space for many events. In the 1950's it was renovated to include Danforth Chapel, a Methodist Church where sermons were held and where students were married. In 1956 it was renamed Kings Religious Center, and was demolished in 1975 to make way for the Design School's Kamphoefner Hall. In its heyday, the YMCA had organized picnics, retreats and other activities. Photo courtesy of University Archives.

ZOOLOGY BUILDING

Originally named the Animal Industry Building, the Zoology Building began construction in 1911 and was completed in 1912. It made the name transition in 1927 and housed the departments of Animal Industry, Poultry, Entomology, and Zoology throughout its 44 year career. Arguably one of the most beautiful, regal, and graceful buildings that NC State has ever had, the Zoology Building helped form a "Quad" with Patterson, Polk, and Daniels Halls. Demolished in 1956, Mann Hall now stands in its place. Photo courtesy of University Archives.
