HISTORY IN BRICK

1911 BUILDING

Built in 1909, the 1911 Building recalls a rich student history. Faculty gave the building its name as a way of honoring the graduating class of 1911, who took it upon themselves to end freshman hazing. Sitting tall atop the Court of North Carolina, the 45,008-square-foot building was originally constructed as a student dormitory, but now houses professors' offices and classrooms. Up until 1940, it was the largest dormitory in the South. Also known as the "Haunted Building," it is full of ghost stories. Photo contributed by Roger Winstead
