

BLAINE SHIPLEY, a senior in civil engineering, browses the shelves at the BOOKSTORE. "I get a lot [of textbooks] from friends. I get part here, out of ease, and order some online," Shipley said. Photo by Marisa Akers.

TK

Place a bookstore memory here.

getting all booked up

STUDENTS PINCH PENNIES TO PURCHASE PILE OF TEXTBOOKS

With the beginning of each semester comes a shopping list — for textbooks.

Before the semester starts, students can look up the textbooks required for each of their classes on the online student service MyPack Portal or from private bookstore websites.

While some students opt to order their textbooks online exclusively from websites like Amazon.com, or rent their books from websites like Chegg.com, others choose to use the bookstore's Price Comparison tool, which allows students to compare the price of new, used, and rental books with others across a variety of online sellers to ensure that students get exactly what they are looking for.

The campus bookstore is required to carry every textbook for every course. Students can also shop around at bookstores close to campus. Additionally, the libraries around campus reserve textbooks for most classes.

